ONLY ONE MORE WEEK

Before the Popular Old Point Comfort Trip.

Only one more week before the crowd will leave for Old Point Comfort. Of all the summer outings the one for Old Point is the best in all respects and the people are not slow to catch on to this fact.

From every section comes the information that numbers are preparing to go to the sea coast and many others will decide to make the trip before the leaving day, August 18.

For picturesque scenery, fine car service, low rates and long ticket limit this trip is the best of all.

The crowds from the various sections will meet in Louisville, Tuesday, August 18, where they will take a special vestibuled train over the popular C. & O. road at 1:30 p. m., for Old Point, arriving at the sea coast at 3 o'clock the next afternoon. There will be several sleepers and parties desiring berths should make application at once to W. A. Wilgus or T. E. Bartley, Hopkinsville.

A large party from Madisonville will join the crowd here, as will be seen from the following from the Hustler:

"Col. W. A. Wilgus, who is working up the trip to Old Point Comfort, was in the city this week assisting J. T. Alexander, the local representative, in booming the excursion. The excursionists will start out on the 18th and a good sized crowd is making arrangements to go from Madisonville. Up to this time about twenty-five have given notice of the trip. These excursions are personally conducted by Mr. Wilgus, who is a prince of good fellows and looks well after the convenience and comfort of the excursionists."

State College of Kentucky.

The Agricultural and Mechanical (State College) College of Kentucky, offers the following courses of study, viz: Agriculture, Horticulture, Chemical, Biological, Mathematical, Physical, Normal School, Classical, Mechanical, Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Civil Engineering, each of which extends over four years and leads to a degree. Post graduate studies are also provided, leading each to a Master's degree. Each course of study is organized under a separate faculty. The general faculty numbers nearly fifty professors and instructors.

COUNTY APPOINTEES receive tuition, room rent in dormitories, fuel and lights, and if they remain ten months, traveling expenses.

The laboratories and museums are large, well-equipped, comprehensive and modern.

The legislature appropriated $60,000 for a college home for young women and $30,000 for drill hall and gymnasium for men. The latter is completed and in use, the former will be ready for occupancy in October.

Military tactics and science are fully provided for as required by Congress.

Graduates from the several courses of study readily find excellent positions and liberal remuneration. The demand is largely in excess of the ability of the college to supply. Last year the matriculation list was 604.

Summer schools are provided for pedagogy, engineering and instruction in science.

Specialists with necessary number of assistants have charge of each department of natural science.

The State College of Kentucky, though bearing hitherto the title of College, is the only institution in the commonwealth doing, in any proper sense, university work.

The completion of the college home for young women will provide facilities for good board and lodging. It is equipped with all modern conveniences, including bath rooms and room for physical culture. It will be heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

An opportunity is afforded to them of a thorough education in Classics, Modern Languages, Literature, Science, Mathematics, Logic, Metaphysics, History and Political Economy. No other institution in the State offers the advantages for the education of women at all comparable to those offered by the State College of Kentucky.

For catalogue, methods of obtaining appointments, information regarding courses of study, and terms of admission apply to JAMES K. PATTERSON, Ph.D., LL.D., Or to D. C. FRAZEE, Bus. Manager, Lexington, Ky.

Fall term begins Sept. 7, 1903.

FAITH OF ORIENTALS.

Illustration of It in Borneo—Prophet's Promise of Flying.

A curious instance of the blindness of the faith of orientals is supplied by events which took place in northern Borneo during the last decade of the nineteenth century. The interior of that portion of the island is inhabited by a race called Muruts, a semi-savage folk living in dirt and squalor engaging in head-hunting and other barbarous practices, and annually reducing themselves to the verge of famine by converting the best part of their crops into infamous native liquor, in which they habitually indulge to excess. Their religion is a crude form of pantheism, but they hold a belief in a future life, their theory being that departed souls congregate upon the inaccessible summits of Kina-Balu, the magnificent mountain which dominates the land in which they dwell. They are apathetically lazy and indolent, prodigal and improvident to a degree, and wholly unambitious of better things.

A prophet suddenly appeared among them, says the London Spectator. He came alone and unattended, a naked Murut like themselves, wandering northward through the mean forest country that lies back of Brunel and the Limbang valley, and bringing with him no credentials save his own lying tongue. Among any except an oriental people he would not have obtained a moment's hearing; but, with the boundless credulity of the Asiatic to aid him, he had no difficulty in enlisting the whole countryside among the number of his disciples. Yet, apart from their lack of proof, the temptation to reject his teachings should surely have been irresistible. The prophet demanded enormous personal sacrifices from his devotees as a step preparatory to their initiation into the mysteries which he taught. The disciple was required to give up his wife, his cattle and all his other property, which straightway passed into the keeping of the prophet, and it was only after that transfer had been effected that the magician would consent to undertake the long series of incantations and other magic ceremonies which were to precede the fulfillment of his promise.

This promise itself was perhaps the most curious part of the whole transaction. It was that he would be able to confer upon the initiated the power to fly! Why a naked Murut should be ready and willing to part with all material things in exchange for the bare prospect of an acquirement so little advantageous to him is not easy to understand or explain, except on the hypothesis that he hoped to use his new power for the purpose of visiting the crest of Kina-Balou, and so in a manner, gaining Heaven before his time.

Whatever the cause of the subtle fascination of the idea, fascinating it unquestionably was to the Muruts, and the prophets had no lack of followers. Wherefore upon a certain day, when the procession of initiation was declared to be complete, a number of men climbed to the tops of the highest coconut trees in their village, and, triumphantly testifying to the boundless faith of the oriental, cast themselves thence to the ground, thus gaining an afterlife, indeed, but without the aid of wings. A failure on so large a scale as this, and fraught with consequences so unpleasant, might have been thought sufficient to cool the enthusiasm and to discredit any prophet, but this was not the case.

The magician explained that the dead men had fallen victims to their inability to comply literally with the minute instructions which he had given them as being essential to their due initiation into his mysteries, and not only was this view of the circumstances accepted in all good faith, but, passing from village to village, he was able to find many to furnish practical proof of their unshaken confidence in his mission, to the material enhancement of his own wealth and the dislocation of his neighbors' necks. How long this state of affairs might have continued it is impossible to guess, but more than a score of men had been killed before the North Borneo Chartered company stepped in, arrested the prophet, amid much popular disapprobation, and immured him in the jail at Sandakan, over the high walls of which his power of flying—of which, by the way, no one had ever had an ocular demonstration—has not served to carry him.

CALEB POWERS

Trial At Georgetown Is Exciting But Little Interest.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 9.—The third trial of Caleb Powers is progressing more speedily than either of the former trials of the defendant. It will consume at the farthest three weeks, two from this day, and may go to the jury before the close of the third week. Most of the witnesses testifying having been on the stand at the other trials. Little or no interest is being manifested by the people of Scott county and of Georgetown in this trial. Less than fifty people assemble each day to watch the proceedings in court, and more than half of this number have left the court room long before adjournment.

There is, however, much interest in the testimony that the convict, Henry Youtsey, will give, and also in that of Frank Cecil and of Henry Broughton, of Bell county, the former sheriff who captured Berry Howard at Pineville, when Howard came to town surrounded by his bodyguard.

JETT-WHITE CASE.

Argument Now In Progress—Night Sessions May Be Held.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 10.—The local interest of Cynthiana is now centered in the outcome of the trial which has been in progress here for the past two weeks. A good deal of speculation is engaged in as to what will be the jury's verdict, but the residents of Harrison county can forecast the result with no more certainty than could a Fiji Islander. Of the hundreds of people who have expressed their opinion no one except the immediate friends of the defense believes that either of the defendants will be acquitted and very few believe that a death sentence will be returned against White.

Judge W. T. Lafferty spoke for the defense to-day and Mr. Thomas Marcum addressed the jury in behalf of the prosecution. Judge Osborne said yesterday that he might hold night sessions of his court if the argument became too long drawn out.

TAYLOR'S PLOT REHEARSED.

Cecil Tells of his Offer For the Death of Goebel.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 8.—The feature of the day in the Powers trial was the introduction by the prosecution of Frank Cecil, of Bell county. Cecil is under indictment for the same offense for which Powers is being tried. Cecil's testimony was offered for the purpose of showing the existence of a conspiracy to bring the mountain men to Frankfort and to show that Powers was responsible for the movement. He testified that Taylor offered a balance of $1,500 from the campaign fund and a free pardon for any man who would kill Goebel.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble, and Don't Know It.

How To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

CAUGHT IN CALIFORNIA.

Fugitive Ward Will Be Returned to Clarksville.

Homer D. Ward, charged with criminal intimacy with two small girls at the Odd Fellows' Home at Clarksville, the alleged offense having been committed while he was Superintendent of the institution, has been arrested at Alameda, Cal. The arrest was made by Nashville officers, who will receive a reward of $500.

Three thousand circulars have been sent to the police and detective department of the United States and Canada, giving descriptions of Ward, and the amount offered for his arrest. It was even thought that he might have gone to the Hawaiian Islands, and officers were looking for him in those distant possessions. As a result of the eager search for him nearly twenty-five arrests of suspects have been made in different parts of the United States.

Ward is about 25 years old, and is a young man of very boyish appearance. Last July he went to Clarksville to accept the position of Superintendent of the Odd Fellows' Home, and held the position until the first part of this year. He is a young man of fine business qualifications, and his apparent faithfulness to duty and to his employers was very pleasing to the management. During January the shocking discovery was made that two of the little girls, inmates of the institution, had been led astray. The victims were only 11 and 13 years old.

The matter caused an investigation, and the ruin of the girls was charged to Ward. The Odd Fellows of Tennessee were aroused and the affair caused a great sensation. While the investigation was pending Ward disappeared and had a good start before the officers were looking for him. President Metzger, of the Board of Trustees, whose home is in Nashville, personally offered a reward for the arrest of the man. The total amount offered by the Odd Fellows is $300. The governor of Tennessee was induced to offer $200. Ward is now enroute to Clarksville, where he will answer the charge.
